

Utah's .05 law will likely be implemented--hopefully other states don't follow their example

The Utah legislative session came to an end last month, which means that the controversial 0.05 blood-alcohol arrest level law is likely to go into effect on December 30th of this year. The American Beverage Institute had an op-ed in the Washington Examiner this morning highlighting the unique circumstances that led to its passage and how similar legislation could spread to other states.

Read the op-ed here.

As always, please feel free to reach out with any comments, questions, or concerns.

Thank you,

Sarah Longwell
Managing Director
American Beverage Institute
(202) 463-7110